R. ERNEST DUPUY has a two-part story on the Battle of the Bulge appearing in Blue Book commencing in the coming December issue. Sparks may fly as Ernie has called 'em as he saw 'em and errors are not glossed over. SHAEF Correspondents will find his handling of the story of this highly controversial subject interesting.

CESAR SAERCHINGER wrote of "Richard Strauss - As I Knew Him", in the October issue of the Saturday Review of Literature..... Hobart Skidmore went as far as Quebec to find a place to live, but is turning back before he hits the igloo country. Besides, he can't mush.

The Honorable Lester Bowles Pearson, Secretary of State for External Affairs of Canada, took time out from a busy day when the question of the Italian Colonies was being voted upon to come to the luncheon of the Overseas Press Club of November 9th. He said that Canada can play useful part in mediation in the United Nations as she has enough responsibility to uphold any of the decisions reached.

Mr. Pearson said that the United Nations has developed a custom of grouping itself into blocks which is not desired--he named the Latin American Commonwealth and Russian blocks. He said that the Slav block always voted together but that the commonwealth block usually met to talk over issues but if they did not agree, then each one voted as he saw fit. Canada can see both points of view for the British and the United States because it is a part of each. He praised the "garden fence" kind of diplomacy which exists between the United States and Canada but warned Americans not to take Canada for granted---Canada is one of the few creditor nations vis-a-vis the United States today. There is more trade between the U. S. and its neighbor to the North than between the U. S. and any other group of nations; but steps have to be taken to equalize this trade as the ratio cannot remain two to one as it is now--in favor of the U. S.
